TIM MATHIJSEN

EXCHANGE DESIGN

Exchanged from class and now is working together with his new fellow class mates. I interviewed Tim as being one of his new class mates about his Design projects that he worked on in the first school semester. He pointed out to me that he had one favorite.

The Architecture lesson by Carla Boomkens. The assignment was to create a space from the class room. The only given rule was to use the class space.

Tim was really enthusiastic. First they created little scale try outs (1:100 or 1:50) Tim really made sure that all the measurements were precise. He came up with the idea to use the space in the class and flip it inside out. So that you'd have a form of abstract space that was formed by the outside building.

Later he discovered by coincidence that the same idea was also used by the artist Rachel Whiteread.
